AT ANCHOR OFF OCEAN VIEW, ?

August 18, 1880. }
I could not help comparing to-day with he 18th of August of last year, as I looked out this morning upon the beautiful clearblue sky. Not a cloud to be seen. A genstorm of last year, of which so much has already been said and written, is still very fresh in the minds of the people on the coast, and wherever we have been the people have questioned us with seeming interest to know how we managed to escape destruction from the gale when the shipping everywhere on the coast, in Hampton Roads, James and Etizabeth rivers, was so damaged. But that storm is over now; we escaped, though we experienced it; and it may be an hundred years before another storm of last year. It came up about 8:30 o'clock on Thursday night of last week, after the first letter from our Club had been ages. The fall of this roof and removal of sent you, and lasted only an hour. The wind blew a great gale for a little while, and some of which were in such a position as to fail faster and faster until it was coming down in torrents; the lightning ran along the beavens and through the clouds, and burial. The catastrophe brought out the highted up the scene far and near; and then fact that the ingenious Abbé Brisacier, of great peals of thunder followed one another in quick succession, making the sight grand in the episcopal archives the names of the

AT SEA-SALUTATIONS. The morning after the storm we left Cobb's Island—that is Friday the 13th. We generally get away from there the day following a storm. Dr. T. O. Hills, of Washington, and his two sons, came aboard about 7 o'clock, and at quarter past 8 o'clock we got under way and went to sea under a light north wind and moderate swell. By 10 o'clock we found ourselves almost be-calmed, and drifted along with the strong ebb-tide towards Cape Henry. It was calm the rest of the day. At 11 A. M. we passed the steamship Hatteras, bound to New York, and exchanged salutations with her by firing our gues and dipping our colors. About an hour later the steamship Manhattan, from New York, passed us bound in to Richmond. We saluted ber. The Hitchings got under way at 11:20, and we at 11:40. The distance from Ocean View to Norfolk via the Old-Point channel is about twenty-one miles. A good preeze was blowing from the southwest, and we were soon far on our way, passing the Hitchings, and in fact everything else ahead of us. We came to anchor on Baker's flats at 1:45 P. M., having made the run of twenty-one miles in two bours and five minutes, which is regarded pretty fair board the Wyanoke, then lying at her wharf, bound to New York. Here we parted, regretfully, with our friend Capers, who went on to Richmond. At 7 o'clock in the evening we broke anchor again and sailed back to Old Point, anchoring there at bedtime.

The following account of the lassoing of us for publication, and, knowing the parties and their high standing for truth and veracity, we give it space in our paper; "George Cornell and Gus Richardson were and when reaching the Muddy, a little north of Anvil Rock, they discovered a short distance ahead, crossing the road, a large cinnamon bear. Gus suggested to his companion that they amuse themselves with his lordship, Bruin. No sooner suggested than adopted. The boys dropped the cattle and prepared their rists for sport. They made a charge upon Bruin, who at first seemed a little independent and oblivious of their presence. Cornell soot had a hitch around the neck of his bearship when commenced a tussle for mastery and liberty. Bruin caught the riata in his teeth and made an effort to sever the strands, when Gus took in the situation and slipped the rope around the hind legs of the ani mal, stretching him out as long as a fencerail. The horses which these gentle-men were riding belog we'l-trained to the work of vaqueros, assisted in holding Bruin safe and sure. Their riatas were now doing good service, and the next ques tion arising was how to get them off from the old fellow, who was groaning in pain and rage, they having left their firearms at home. A thought struck Gus. He backed his horse up, fastened the riata to the pum-mel of the saddle, commanded him to stand firm while he dismounted, and commenced firm while he dismounted, and commenced a fustlade with rocks. The head of the hear was pretty severely bruised, the blood running profusely from his nostrils, when George recollected that he had a pocket-knife. Quicker than thought he was upon the ground, and scientifically approached the struggling hear, fetched him a tickler under the short-ribs, which ended the struggle, with victory for two of the hest vaqueros in Arizona. Gus says the hear died game, giving a cross-eyed glance while breathing his last."

But a few days since mention was made of an order for paas pilgrims from the far East—Syris, according to the usual version—that they might receive the blessing of St. Martin. They found the saint passing most of his time in a small cavern. They occupied one near it. One day they received from St. Martin the eucharist, and presently fell askeep. There was no appearance of death; they remained in a breathless, motionless slumber for weeks, months; and then, though there was no decay, it was thought right to lay them in bollow rock tombs. END OF A USEFUL AND HONORABLE LIFE-HES CAREER IN THE NATIONAL AND CONFEDERATE COUNCILS—THE PEACE COMMISSION— CONFEDERATE SECRETARY OF WAR-FT-NERAL SERVICES. &C.

Hon. James A. Seddon died yesterday corning at his residence, Sabot Hill, Goochland county, in the sixty-sixth year of his age, after a painful illness of about four weeks. The death of a man so widelyknown, and who at one time occupied such prominent positions both in the Federal and Confederate Governments, deserves more than a passing notice.

Mr. Seddon was born in Fredericksburg

July 3, 1815, and was the son of Thomas ued by the Enon ebureb. Seddon, a prominent merchant of that place, and Sarah Alexander, daughter of William Alexander, of Stafford county. He left college with distinguished bonors, and at once entered upon the practice of law. In 1840 be moved to Richmond, and at once entered upon a lucrative practice, became well known and universally popular. In 1844 he was elected to the session of Congress commencing March 4, 1845. In 1846 he declined a reelection, and the Democrats tost the district, Walter D. Leake, Esq., being defeated by Hon. John Minor Botts. In 1848 Mr. Seddon, against his will, was again unanimously brought forward as the Democratic standard bearer, and was triumphantly elected, his antagonist being again Mr. Botts. In 1846 he married Miss Sarah Bruce, daughter of James Bruce, Esq., of Halifax. In 1858 Mr. Seddon pe-remptorily declined again serving in Congress, and was succeeded by Hon. John S. Caskie, of this city. Mr. Seddon's reason for this declension was that all of his time was occupied in the proper, management of his large property acquired by inheritance, marriage, and accumulation.

Among the contemporaries of Mr. Seddon in Congress were Andrew Johnson, John J. Crittenden, Hancibal Hamlin, R. gold watch by an unknown negro. the history of the nation. Mr. Seddon's M. T. Mr. Seddon warmly espoused the cause of the Confederate States, and on the resignation of Hon. George W. In the winter of 1864-'65 he resigned. and was succeeded by General John C. Breckinridge. From this time Mr. Seddon did not again appear in public life.
